EL PASO, Texas -- The Rio Grande runs through three states and separates two countries, and on Saturday, El Pasoans helped to keep it clean.

During the event called "Be a Hero Save the Rio," volunteers were in El Paso's Lower Valley clearing the river and its banks of trash and debris collected in the water and surrounding brush.

"This is just one of the activities that we're doing to try to promote a clean river and promote recreation by the river and get people out to see the river," said Elizabeth Verdecchia.

This was all thanks to a team effort by the Texas Clean Rivers Program, Thunderbird Digital, Guest Life and the Boy Scouts of America Yucca Council.
